AF Will Add 25 Gen's, Promote Thousands More: Total For All Services Over 80,000

(New Air Force Grade Structure Page 8)

Air Force general officer ranks will obrought to full authorized strength during the fiscal year beginning in July.

This means an increase of 25 generals over the number now on active duty.

In addition, thousands of promotions are planned to the ranks of colonel, lieutenant colonel, major and captain, movement colonel major and captain, movement colonel major and captain, movement colonel major and captain, movement and captain movements.

tenant colonel, major and captain, mov-ing the strength of these four grades nearer the ceilings established by the Of-ficer Grade Limitations Act.

By mid-1957, the Air Force expects to have 449 general officers on active duty. This is the top number authorized by the Limitations Act. At present there are 424 active duty AF generals.

The number of colonels will rise from 4433 during the last quarter of 1956 to 4806 on 30 June 1957, an increase of 398, lieutenant colonels from 8813 to 9722. an increase of 1,307; majors from 21,244 to 22,499. an increase of 2,562 and captains from 35,866 to 40,517, an increase of 7,213.

The above figures reflect promotions which are made out of each grade as well as to the grade. For example, although the number of colonels goes from 4.433 to 44.806, an apparent increase of only 373, the total number of promotions will actually be 398, because 25 colonels will have been promoted to brigadier general and these vacancies will be filled by new colonels.

Statistics are not available on promo-tions to first lieutenant, but it is expected that about 20,000 second lieutenants will that about 20,000 second fleutenants will be boosted up the ladder.

This could bring total Service promotions during FY '57 to more than 80,000. Promotion plans for the other three Services were disclosed in The Journal last week. Here is a breakdown showing promotions planned by the Air Force promotions planned by the Air Force from last quarter of '55 to 30 June 1957 and by each of the other three Services for the period from 1 July 1956 through 30 June 1957:

HISTORY REPEATED

The Army is stnding an airborne division overseas for the first peacetime deployment in history. The 11th Airborne Division has been moving out during recent weeks from Ft. Campbell, Ky., to new station in Germany.

While overseas, the 11th will be transported and dropped by the 317th Troop Carrier Wing—the same unit which won the Presidential Unit citation by carrying troopers of the 11th to Corregidor in WWII. THE JOURNAL publishes on Page 11 a special article on the 317th by its commander, Col. Joseph A. Cunningham, USAF.

Capitol Considers $2908 Medical Pay Hike; Vote Ahead On Family Care Plan

What's Wrong & What's Needed, p. 3

The possibility of raising the pay of Service physicians and dentists to con-form with higher Civil Service rates was advanced this week as hearings opened on the Medical Career Incentives

Such a move would add as much

Such a move would add as much as $1752 to $2908 to the pay of military physicians. The Administration seeks a maximum boost of $912 per year.

The Kilday House Armed Services Subcommittee, which recently completed hearings on the Dependent MediCare bill, heard top Pentagon officials make a strong bid for a career medical force of 7,200 Regular doctors and dentists—double the present strength.

Both medical measures are expected to be reported to the House floor this month by the full Armed Services Committee. A quick vote is anticipated.

The Dependent MediCare Bill, to cost $76 million, provides a $25 deductible free premium insurance plan for military families unable to obtain care in military hospitals, and continues present treatment in military facilities.

The new MediCareer measure (HR $500), to cost $8.4 million, is designed to attract more physicians to military Service. As currently drafted, it boosts the pay of doctors and dentists as much as

Civil Service rates for physicians employed by the Government are substantially higher than present rates for mili-

Representative Charles E. Bennett (D-Fla) raised the question of equalizing the two pay scales. He was told by a Pentagon spokesman that the Defense Department would have no objection to such a move such a move.

Gen. LeMay Tells of SAC Skills

General Curtis E. LeMay, USAF, C-in-C of the Strategic Air Command told the Adventurers' Club in New York City on 15 Feb. that in fulfilling his responsibility for combat readiness, he needs to ask and answer only three questions:

First, can SAC crewmen, flying from bases here and overseas, find their targets with certainty?

The answer is an unqualified yes. On celestial navigation alone, yes. On celestial navigation alone, our crews can fly to within 15 miles of any spot on earth, and from there move to their targets with precision by radar navigation. Second, when they arrive over their targets, can they destroy them?

Again, the answer is an unqualified yes. By means of carefully scored bombing runs, each of these scored bombi crews have proved its ability on hundreds of occasions. I should like to point out that their targets are not citiesthey are of-ten specific corners of build-ings within military target areas. By a com-bination of radar and radio, we can tell with what degree of accuracy any given crew is bombing.

Third, having destroyed their targets, will these crews get back? Again, the answer is yes. In World War II, using mass forma-tions of bombers, subject to massed attack, our percentage of losses was less than two per cent. The odds are in favor of our bombers.

PENTAGON WANTS INTERSERVICE TRANSFERS

The Defense Department has called upon Congress to vote legislation authorizing Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps officers to swap Services. At present, Interservice Transfer is restricted to the Medical Services.

The Air Force, which is monitoring the legislation, will tell the Armed Services Committees that effective utilization of manpower and safeguarding of opportunities for individuals will be enhanced by its passage. The point will be made that because of "rapid and often unpredictable technological advances," one Service may find itself with a surplus of officers with particular qualifications, while another Service would have a shortage.

The Pentagon's official statement is published on page 3.

ADMIRAL RADFORD, JCS CHAIRMAN, speaking on 11 Feb. to the National Council Meeting of the Reserve Offi-cers Association did not suggest that cers Association did not suggest that a large reserve could mean a cut in active strength. He stated that "Ready Reserve Forces are essential to our defense posture," and added that "they help stabilize our military programs for the long pull." The in-teresting word here is "estabilize" programs for the long pull." The in-teresting word here is "stabilize." Admiral Radford gave primary emphasis in this address to the "readiness role" of the Services. He commented that "Readiness is fitness and competence. It takes years practice. It requires training." A practice. It requires training." And it is becoming apparent that the "readiness" level which Admiral Radford and other members of the JCS believe essential will require active forces of close to 3 million men and women for the next several years at least.

HOUSE APPROPRIATIONS SUBCOMMITTEES this eek plunged deeper into detailed examination of the Naweek plunged deeper into detailed examination of the Nation's defense program during hearings on the military budget for the year starting 1 July. This plan calls for spending $35.547 billion, compared with an estimated $34.5 billion in the current fiscal year. Pentagon officials who have appeared before the House money group in closed-door sessions report that the election-year hearings are moving at a good clip. Some relate, however, that there has been close questioning on the matter of whether sufficient funds close questioning on the matter of whether sufficient funds have been requested.

THERE IS LITTLE CHANCE that the House or Senate will make any significant changes in the program advo-cated by President Eisenhower, though it is certain that some legislators will strive to increase airpower outlays, notably in the guided missile field. As has been the case since Congress reconvened, a group of Democrats, led by Senators Jackson of Washington and Symington of Missouri, continue to criticize the Defense Department's guided missile program. They now point to the resignation of As-sistant Air Force Secretary Trevor Gardner to back their case that more energy should be given to guided and ballistic missile work.

DEFENSE SECRETARY WILSON, who has maintained pursued with adequate vigor, visited this week at the Army Ballistic Missile Agency, Redstone Arsenal, Ala., commanded by Maj, Gen. John B. Medaris, USA. It can be expected that the Secretary will take the occasion of his next news conference or an early public address to report further on the guided missile controversy. Expectation at the ther on the guided missile controversy. Expectation at the Pentagon this week was that Mr. Wilson momentarily would name a Special Assistant for Guided Missiles. (On Page 30, there is a round-up of new missile developments.)

ALTHOUGH MISSILES HAVE COMMANDED top attention, the Appropriations Committees this year will be adjusting to the highly significant long-term recognition that it will not be possible to cut the size of the Armed Forces, notwithstanding new weapons and the once bright promises of a speedy strengthening of the Reserve Forces. During the past several years, many Pentagon leaders in-dicated that it might be possible to reduce the size of the Active Forces if the Reserve could be bolstered. That approach is not receiving comparable emphasis this year—in fact the FY '57 budget seeks a limited increase in military

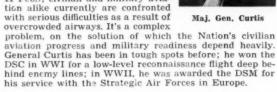

AN INTERESTING SIDELIGHT to the start of hearings on the Medical Career Incentives Bill (Page 1) this week was the testimony of the noted physician, Dr. Howard Rusk, who is an Associate Editor of the New York Times. His support for legislation to raise the pay of physicians and dentists will provide an important assist to Pentagon advocates. Important also was the fact that Dr. Rusk was introduced to members of the Armed Services Committee by Chairman Clarence Cannon (D-Mo.) of the Appropriations Committee. Since Chairman Cannon has a vital say in approving military expenditures, his participation in the medical hearings could augur well for chances of the leg-islation. As The Journal went to press, it appeared possible that the Kilday Subcommittee would wind up hearings in quick order, with the main question being not whether to give physicians and dentists a raise—but how much.

that vacancies exist for permanent and temporary major and brigadier generals.

The Senate Armed Services committee has been holding up a lengthy list of general officer promotions but was ex-pected to act late this week.

MEDICAL CARE "SERIOUSLY JEOPARDIZED"

The Defense Department has advised Congress that as a result of the heavy loss of specialists in the Army, Navy and Air Force Medical Corps "adequate medical care is seriously jeopardized."

The Pentagon said that next year the Services will be forced to get along with less than four out of every 10 specialists that are required.

It was stated that the "minimum requirement" for specialists in the Armed Services is below that in civilian life. The Defense Department contends that unless it is able to attract and hold more physicians and dentists with specialist training, it will be necessary to continue the Doctor Draft.

What is of concern to all Service families is the fact that the quality of medical care will drop unless more specialists are kept in uniform.

Medical Pay Hike

Representative L. Mendel Rivers (D. SC) added that he, also, thinks the proposed pay increases are too low.

In opening the hearings, Chairman Paul J. Kilday (D-Tex) noted that the MediCare proposal will accomplish three objectives. It will:

1—Increase the amount of constructive

1—Increase the amount of constructive credit that may be granted to a physician from four to five years;
2—Increase the amount of constructive credit that may be granted to a dentist credit that may be granted to a dentist from three to four years;

3—Permit this constructive credit to be counted for longevity purposes, and allow individuals to be promoted to the grade of captain in the Army and AF or lieutenant in the Navy following their appointment as medical or dental officers at any time after one year following completion of medical or dental school.

These steps are expected to enhance

These steps are expected to enhance military medical careers and assist the Services in retaining more doctors and dentists as Regular officers.

Chairman Kilday said his group will take a closer look at the problem in an attempt to find the most effective answer.

"Alarming Proportions"

Dr. Frank B. Berry, Assistant Secre-ary of Defense (Health and Medical) told the committee that "losses of career medical and dental officers have reached alarming proportions."

He said unless the trend is checked it "will seriously compromise the ability of the respective military medical services to carry out their mission," and, if continued, it could mean "in a few years the Regular Corps would almost cease to exist." to exist.

Assistant Secretary of Defense Carter L. Burgess, Pentagon manpower chief, testified that 13,600 doctors entered the military services during the last three fiscal years and 16,000 left to return to civilian life.

This high rate of turnover—of almost 30,000 doctors coming and going in three years"—is expensive, he said, "But, of greater importance, it results in constant dilution of experie levels and thus diminishes the quality of medical care for our Servicemen."

"Two-Thirds" Structure

The Pentagon said it needs 10,800 medical officers and its objective is to increase the career medical and dental officer strength to two-thirds of the total (or 7,200) as a minimum requirement adequate stability and experience rels. The additional one-third would obtained through a modified regular

"Establishment of this two-thirds ca-"Establishment of this two-thirds career structure," the Pentagon said, "would have the two-fold effect of producing a stable, experienced medical and dental corps and eliminating the need for drafting experienced doctors from civil life."

Each additional career military doctor the Services are able to retain will eliminate the need for drafting four civilian doctors every six years, a spokesman said.

A force of 10,800 doctors would provide a ratio of 3.4 doctors for each thousand men in uniform.

Dr. Howard A. Rusk, Chairman of the Citizens Advisory Commission, Office of Defense Mobilization, also testified in Defense Mobilization favor of the bill.

It was the Rusk Commission which recomme ided the current doctor-troop ratio used by the Armed Forces.

Services Are Praised

Doctor Rusk said the present ratio was based on the overall needs of both civilian and military communities and that with the shortage of doctors the only answer was to cut down the doctor-troop ratio in the Armed Forces. Some 1500 civilian communities he said do 1500 civilian communities, he said, do not have even one physician.

He lauded the Services for the excellent medical record they have set while operating with a reduced medical force. In endorsing the MediCareer bill, Doctor Rusk said his group feels "the only solution is a career incentive program which can attract and regim career officers." which can attract and retain career offiers in the Service

THE purpose of the proposed legislation is to provide authority for the transfer of Regular and Reserve officers between the armed services. No effective device for such transfers now exists except for officers holding commissions in the medical services or corps. Under the provisions of the National Security Act of 1947, there existed authority to transfer officers between the Army and the Air Force but that authority expired in July 1950.

The only general procedure whereby an officer may transfer from one armed service to another is by resignation and reappointment in another service. This procedure is generally unsatisfactory, particularly in the case of Regular officers, due to restrictions on initial permanent appointments in the Regular components to grades above first lleutenant and lleutenant (junior grade) and the lack of authority to make adjustments in promotion and lineal lists and precedence.

Rapid Advances Cited

As organizational changes and changes in programs and missions of the armed services take place to keep pace with rapid and often unpredictable technological advances, instances occur in which one armed service may develop a relative surplus of officers with certain technical, professional, or scientific training and experience, while at the same time another armed force may be experiencing a shortage of similarly qualified and trained personnel.

Many military and naval academy graduates, desirous of undertaking flying training, decline to select the Air Force as a career because, under existing conditions for transfer, they would be required to complete their careers as nonrated officers in the Air Force in the event of their subsequent elimination from flying training. It is essential that opportunities for interservice transfer be afforded in such situations to permit maximum utilization of our manpower hesources; also, to afford maximum opportunity for achievement on the part of individual officers concerned through continuity in their selected specialties or fields of endeavor.

Interests Protected

Interests Protected

Interests Protected

In order that such transfers would be both in the interest of the natural defense and in the interest of the officer to be transferred, the proposed legislation would require not only the consent of both armed services concerned but also the consent of the officer to be transferred.

Similarly, in order to prevent impingement on State control of the National Guard and Air National Guard, the consent of the Governor or other appropriate official of the State, Territory, or District of Columbia is required in the case of an officer of the National Guard of the United States or the Air National Guard of the United States.

Service Quarters "Unfit For Livestock" Scored In House Report; Action Demanded

Some Servicemen and their families assigned to the Guantanamo Bay Naval Base in Cuba are being forced to occupy quarters "unfit to house livestock."

That bristling charge is made this week in a report of a House Banking and Currency Subcommittee.

Calling for an improved world-wide military family housing program, highlighted by a three-year extension of Capehart Housing, the Subcommittee told of "deplorable" conditions encountered during an inspection of 10 militered during an inspection of 10 mili-tary installations.

At Guantanamo Bay, the Congressional group found 206 enlisted families assigned to "substandard" public quarters and 112 others forced to live off base, some in quarters which were so bad the Subcommittee said it could not ade-quately describe them.

"Filth, vile stench, open sewers, disease, rat infestation make these quarters unfit to house livestock much less American service personnel," the group Proported reported.

In the Canal Zone, the Subcommittee In the Canal Zone, the Subcommittee found military personnel occupying substandard public quarters which were built for construction workers during the early days of the canal (1910). Some of the frame buildings, specifically those in the Coco Solito housing development located on the Atlantic terminal of the Panama Canal, "serve as a constant fire hazard," the report states.

Recommend Changes

and deficiencies in the picture, "The lack of adequate housing is clearly one of the most harassing problems facing our military services," the Subcommittee declared.

Chairman Rains called for a three-year extension of the present Capehart Program.

Under the so-called Capehart housing authority (Title VIII of the National Housing Act), the Services are authorized to contract with private builders for the construction of 100,000 homes on or near military and naval bases, to be paid for with the rental allowances of the occupants.

The Capehart authority is due to ex-

Army Has 6-Year Aviation Program, 28 Divisions Ideal, Says Gen. Taylor

General Taylor

General Maxwell D. Taylor, Chief of Staff of the Army, appeared on the "Face the Nation" program Sunday, 12 Feb., on the CBS Television Net-

Members of the Panel Members of the Panel were Anthony H. Leviero, New York Times; James R. Shepley, Time-Life; and Rowland Evans, jr., New York Herald Tribune, with Stuart Novins as Moderator. erator.

Following are excerpts from that program:

Q. General, what changes have taken place in the relative positions of strength between this country and the Soviet Union that make it safe for the make it safe for the Army to reduce its manpower by almost 30 per power by almost 30 per Gener cent in 18 months?

A. It's very difficult to talk in terms of comparison. Certainly political changes, economic changes, play an important role in deciding on the strength of our military establishment, also military developments have to also military developments have to be considered. Some of the changes, of course, have been the cessation of the course, have been the cessation of the active operations in Korea. There have been our ability to redeploy our forces so that we have a central reserve, which we did not have a few years back. Also the increased professionalism of our Army.

Q. General, suppose you could forget the price tags, what size Army do you think we should have to meet to-you think we should have to meet to-day's commitments?

A. No Chief of Staff is ever satis-fied with either the size or the quality of his Army, otherwise he should be fired; but I would say that perhaps if there were no other considerations, other than my own Army considera-tions, an Army of around a million and a half men, perhaps.

Q. How many divisions would that be?

Oh, 27, 28, perhaps.

Q. Is the Army satisfied now with the tactical aviation support that it's getting from the Air Force?

A. Well, that, of course, is like being satisfied with the Army; we can never afford to be satisfied with any never affort to be satisfied with any form of military strength. We must do better all the time. I think my friends in the Air Force would certainly join me in that statement. The difficulties of close air support obviously are very great, particularly in view of the increased performance of our airplanes, as time goes on.

Q. Several of your predecessors, both General Ridgway and General Collins, have said at one time or another in the course of their tenure as Chief of Staff that the Army would be better served if it had its own tactical air force. Do you subscribe to tical air force. Do you subscribe to these views?

A. I am not sure that those gentle-

A. I am not sure that those gentle-men ever phrased it quite that way. I will say this: At the present time I am still looking to the Air Force to provide close air support, and I am not seeking my own air force by any manner of means.

Q. What about your logistical air, are you satisfied with the Air Force's role in this regard?

A. The Air Force has no role there.
That is strictly an Army role, to provide the internal transportation neces wae the internal transportation neces-sary to move our men, our supplies and our equipment on the battlefield. That's the purpose of our aviation program in the Army. It is not in competition with the Air Force.

Q. Do you have your own transport now? I thought the Air Force controlled your transport.

A. Not insofar as the fixed wing aircraft, the small ones, the helicopters, those things which we are—

I mean, if you wanted to transport a battalion or a regimental com-bat team to the Pacific tomorrow, don't you have to go to the Air Force?

A. Yes. That's a dif-ferent kind of thing. That's a strategic air-

Q. You don't control that?

that?
A. We do not; we've got to request that.
There are two kinds of airlift that we usually talk about, in the relations between the Air Force and the Army: the kind which was involved in the landing in volved in the landing in Paylor Normandy, in other words, the assault air-lift in which we have to have special-lift in which we have to have specialized aircraft going in under fire. The other is the strategic kind, where you move large bodies of troops, as you say, from the United States to Japan, for example.

So, really, you have to distinguish between those two kinds before you discuss the subject.

Both of those kinds are supplied by the Air Force.

Q. Does the Air Force supply you enough airlift to move the divisions you would like to move by air, your airborne divisions? Can you move your airborne divisions by air tomorrow?

Not simultaneously, no.

Q. How many of them can you

A. I don't like to state that on the air.

Q. Are you satisfied with the number you can?

A. No; I would like to have more.

Q. And why, then, can't you have more? Is it because the Air Force is not supplying the airlift you think you need?

A. Well, it's always a question of competing requirements, and the Air Force has a serious problem of meet-ing its budgets and its need. Plainly, they don't have all the types of com-bat aircraft they want, any more than I think they have all of the transport aircraft, I suppose-

Q. General, there have been reports recently that the Army is in fact planning a considerable increase in what it calls Army Aviation. Is this—are these reports accurate?

We are most anxious to continue to progress in this internal transport field. That is the kind of organic aviation which we come which moves our tion which we own, which moves our own people on the battlefield.

Yes, we have a six-year program ahead of us which I think is vital to the future of the Army.

Q. Would you discuss that briefly for us?

A. Yes. It's the continued devel-opment of a program which has been in existence for some time. It's to give us the low performance aircraft, aircraft with a short runway capability that can be right with our troops to that can be right with our troops to give us observation from the air, for our artillery, for our missiles, to move small bodies of troops, on reconnais-sance, and that kind of thing, to move our supplies over rivers and moun-tains, if necessary.

Q. What are the numbers of aircraft that this six-year program envisions, sir?

A. I don't have the exact number, A. I don't have the exact number, but the order of four or five thousand, little ones, and medium-sized, but all low performance, not of the type the Air Force has, or wants to have.

Rear Screen Projection Cuts Class Distraction

A method for obtaining a rear screen projection effect with an ordinary film projector has been devised by Capt. Leo. J. Kramer, USA, commander of Company M at The Engineer Center Regiment. Ft. Belvoir, Va.

Noting that students were distracted by noise from the projector and its beam, Captain Kramer, with the aid of S 1/c Stanley Mason and Sp. 2/c John Reed developed a technique of projecting the film to a 40 x 55 inch screen from a projector located at the rear of the creen.

Through the use of three mirrors, the image from the projector is enlarged and finally reflected to the rear of an acetate screen. Observers on the opposite side of the screen see the image clearly and with none of the annovances attending the usual method of film projection.

Allison Prop-Jet Power for Eastern

☆ Serving more United States cities than any other airline ☆

Eastern's new Lockheed Electras -world's fastest, smoothest, most luxurious airliners - will fly at well over 400 miles an hour!

AFTER years of engineering re-search covering all types of aircraft power units, Eastern Air Lines has selected Allison Prop-Jet engines and Aeroproduct Propellers for our fleet of 40 new radarequipped Lockheed Electra airliners.

This decision represents a great step forward in Eastern's progress into the jet age, and reflects our conviction that Allison Prop-Jet power, a product of General Motors, is the most efficient and dependable engine-propeller team for the new Lockheed

This new Allison engine harnesses the vast power of a modern gas turbine to a propeller. It uses less fuel than a straight jet, yet it enables aircraft to fly faster with greater payload than any other propeller-type aircraft engine in commercial use today.

Allison-powered Electras will be in service on Eastern Air Lines routes in the Fall of 1958. Flying at speeds of well over 400 miles an hour, these 66-passenger airliners will offer unprecedented smoothness of flight, a new standard of quiet, restful comfort, and the highest degree of dependability.

We of Eastern congratulate General Motors on this great achievement in aircraft power, an achievement that will help bring the untold benefits of modern air transportation to more millions of people in the years to come.

Essit The Entracker

I AM happy to announce that Captain Eddie Rickenbacker, one of the most highly respected figures in aviation and dean of the air transportation industry, has chosen Allison Prop-Jet engines and Aeroproduct Propellers for Eastern's new fleet of Lockheed Electra airliners.

Captain Rickenbacker's decision is a magnificent tribute to General Motors and the Allison Prop-Jet engine, the first gas turbine engine to receive Civil Aeronautics Administration approval for commercial service.

The Allison Prop-Jet engine is the most advanced power plant of its type and is backed by more than 7 million hours of turbine engine flight time in military aircraft.

In Allison Prop-Jet power, General Motors again demonstrates its leadership in the development of power for all kinds of transportation. In aviation, in motor vehicles, in locomotives and in marine engines, GM has gained the confidence of millions of people who daily depend upon GM

In air transportation, Eastern Air Lines has earned and held the confidence of the traveling public for over 27 years. General Motors and Allison Division are proud to join Captain Rickenbacker and Eastern Air Lines in this great contribution to the future of commercial aviation, national defense and the progress of American-designed and American-powered aircraft.

At the same time that it is confronted with manpower deficiencies, the Air Force is continuing to build its wing strength. Latest official reports give the Air Force 127 active wings, with four more due by the end of the fiscal year. Six will be added in fiscal '57 to attain the 137-wing target.

Preliminary reports show that at the Preliminary reports show that at the beginning of February the Air Force had about 143,900 officers and approximately 791,600 airmen. There were approximately 270,000 Air Force officers and airmen on duty overseas.

The Air Force has advised its people that audit of travel vouchers has revealed instances in which personnel traveling under the same orders, on identical itineraries, and between the same points, are claiming identical taxi fares.
"This indicates that taxis are not authorized on a 'share-the-ride' basis, of the rides are shared, that fares in excess of actual costs are being claimed," the Air Force stated.

A reminder was made that use of taxis on "share-the-ride" basis saves money for the Government. It was added that reimbursements of claims for fares in excess of actual costs falls under the scope of paragraph 70316 AFM 173-10, "Forfeiture of Fradulent Claims."

must be fast, accurate, dependable and lightweight. They must also cope with ambient temperatures that are approaching or exceeding 1000 F. Solar's unique new Microjet pressure ratio controls can meet the most stringent requirements of aircraft and missile design.

By pneumatically sensing pressure ratio parameters directly, Microjet units can control a completely variable area jet nozzle, turbojet or ramjet engine fuel flow, compressor air bleed, variable inlet duct geometry, or perform many other computing functions.

Microjet controls are simple, rugged and versatile. They are already proven on many high-performance engines. Let Solar demonstrate how Microjet controls can solve difficult problems for you. Address Solar Aircraft Company, Dept. B-131, 2200 Pacific Highway, San Diego 12, Calif.

A Spur To Housing. The time and care which the House Banking and Currency Subcommittee have given to the problem of family housing is an excellent indication of the change in attitude that has been taking place toward the Services over

This subcommittee, under the chairmanship of Representative Albert Rains (D-Ala), has been conducting a study of progress made under the Capehart provision of the National Housing Act with a view to recommending changes. Although the Act is primarily for civilian housing, the subcommittee turned to the military phase early in its study because they believe "there can no longer be disagreement upon the vital need to provide housing of the quality and quantity needed to assure the effective and efficient performance of the mission of each of the Services."

Preliminary to its study, the Subcommittee visited ten military installations where they saw for themselves the need for family housing and the dangers to the military effectiveness by not having it. They came away impressed that the "lack of adequate housing is clearly one of the most harassing problems facing our military services." Citing the Air Force as an example, the group reported to the full committee that lack of adequate housing: 1) delays the manning, training, and development of combat capability in new units; 2) reduces the certainty our combat-ready wings will be fully effective in event of hostilities: and 3) has a serious, immediate, and long range effect on our air power. The committee added that this need for housing is not limited to any one Service "for there is common need for housing by each of the three principal

In its preliminary recommendations (the committee intends to continue keeping its finger on military housing during the next year), the group urges that the Act be extended at least three years by providing a cut-off date of 30 Sept. 1959. The members also want to extend the Act's coverage to include the Panama Canal Zone and Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, providing it can be done legally.

A most important recommendation is that the average cost limitation per family be increased from $13,500 to $16,500 and that the aggregate insurance authorization be boosted accordingly by $303 million. The present limitations, the members feel, restrict the Services to houses considerably smaller than desirable.

The Subcommittee wants it recognized that this housing for Service families is a genuine military need and to that end they are unhappy that under current practices the FHA Commissioner has reduced or eliminated-"in a somewhat arbitrary manner"-projects that have been recommended by the Service Secretaries. They want it understood that the Secretary of Defense should have the responsibility for determining the location and number of units.

The earnestness with which this Banking and Currency Subcommittee has gone into the subject of military housing is a most welcome indication. The House Committee on Armed Services has long been aware of the problem and is willing to do what it can within its province and most certainly will lend its prestige and support to other committees that recognize the need.

What the PX Means. While there still remains some die-hard opposition to the Post Exchanges, considerable satisfaction may be had from the progress made over recent years in winning public support for this very important adjunct to Service family life.

One evidence of this progress is the honor accorded Maj. Gen. H. L. Peckham, USA, Chief of ARMY · NAVY · AIR FORCE the Army and Air Force Exchange Service, by the Textile Square Club in New York City (story on page 30).

General Peckham took the occasion to explain to these industry executives some of the benefits that accrue to them from the far-flung activities of his organization. For example, without the operation of the Post Exchanges in Europe and the Far East the many thousands of Soldiers. Sailors, Airmen and Marines and their families living abroad would be forced into local markets to meet their personal needs. However, the ready availability of U.S. manufactured goods in the PXs keeps them supplied with the products with which they are familiar-they never lose contact with the brands they are accustomed to and which they want. This is a real service to American industry and it is emphasized by the fact that the PXs stock only those brands and that type of merchandise which their Service customers want-there is no such thing as pushing unknown brands or "frantic" sales—the Service customer gets what he asks for.

With millions of American families rotating back and forth from the States to overseas stations in the course of years this continued contact with the products of U.S. manufacturers is a genuine service to both seller and buyer.

There always will be certain elements picking on the PXs, but with a clean record of service to the defense forces and continued support of American business their future will continue to merit Congressional backing.

10 Years Ago—A new machine, a mathematical robot known as the ENIAC (Electronic Numerical Integrator and Computor), capable of calculating 1,000 times faster than the most advanced general-purpose calculating machine previously built, has been designed and con-structed for the Ordnance Department at the Moore School of Electrical Engineering of the University of

50 Years Ago—The opinion seems to prevail in official circles in Washington that the United States is soon to be called upon to send an armed expedition into China to protect American interests there. The foundation for this opinion seems to be in certain alarming reports recently received by the Department of State regarding the spread of anti-foreign and anti-American feeling among the middle classes in China

90 Years Ago-Many of our countrymen have been astonished to find the European sympathizers with the late Confederacy proclaiming that its death was noble and in good cause; and in many ways testifying that the attempt at disjointing our Union had every merit but that of success.

READERS' VIEWS

(Letters to the Editor must have author's name and address, but name will be omitted on publication if writer so states. Longer letters may be extracted for publication.)

Regular vs. Reserve Retirement Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I have noted with interest that the Department of the Air Force has been designated as the representative of the Department of Defense to develop and seek enactment of appropriate legislation to provide a more uniform basis for retirement of military personnel. There are presently existing glaring living incomiting in ently existing glaring inequities in retirement benefits between retired regular officers and retired reserve officers. For example:

a. Retirement credits.—To preface, must be realized that many regular officers have retired for various reasons without having completed the 30 years of active duty neces-sary to attain maximum retirement credits. (For example, the erroneous belief that the retirement credits of an individual would not be decreased after his retirement.) Now these retired regular officers, as well as the reserve officers, are required to re-main in readiness for recall to active duty in the event of war. However, they are not offered the opportunity to keep in training for this possible recall; nor, are they offered an incentive to keep in training by addi-tions to their retirement credits. On the other hand, the reserve officer is offered both of these opportunities. When the latter leaves the active service, the equivalent of two weeks annual active duty keeps him in training, and allows him credit for one year of active duty toward retirement pay at age 60. Even after retirement at age 60, the reserve officer can continue these annual training. cer can continue these annual train-ing periods and add to his retire-ment credits until he has attained the maximum 30-year retirement pay. This inequity could be correct-ed by the equivalent of two weeks annual active duty training for the retired regular officer, with credit for one year of active duty toward retirement pay to become effective at age 60. This would place the re-tired regular officer on an equal retirement credit basis with the reserve officer, and should benefit both the government and the retired regular

b. Dual employment.—The restrictions regarding dual employment placed upon the retired regular officer do not apply to reserve officers. If the average retired regular officer can find employment at all, it must be almost anything he can get, and be almost anything he can get, and with little pay. At age 60, the average reserve officer is reaching the peak of his civilian pay, with still a number of years left in that desirable position. Further, the chances are good that he will receive civilian retirement pay upn his eventual retirement from his civilian career.

Problem of the home.-The greater part of the average man's lifetime savings are invested in his home, if he is fortunate enough to own one. The average retired reg-ular officer has been moved from place to place during his active ca-reer, living in rented houses. Upon retirement, he is faced with the problem of continuing to rent, or to buy and furnish a home, on a sharply reduced income. On the other hand, the average reserve officer has lived in one place, paying for a home at less than rent cost. He starts drawing retirement pay at age 60 with his home paid for, and his peak civilian pay augmented by his retiremeent pay.

After careful consideration of these inequities, it is not surprising that thinking men would prefer the bright retirement future of the reserve officer to the comparatively dim retirement future of the retired regular officer. COLONEL, USAF, RET.

Oldest Major General Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I refer to page 27 of your issue of 7 an. under the heading of Obituaries. It is noted therein pertaining to the late Maj. Gen. Charles Stewart Farnsworth, USA Ret., that you say "At the time of his death, he was the ident hims of his reach of his rank 93".

"At the time of his death, he was the oldest living officer of his rank, 93."

The above quoted statement is incorrect. A quick examination of the Official Army Register, 1 Jan. 1948, page 2250, will show that Maj. Gen. Henry C. Hodges, jr., O 13131, USA. Retired, was born 20 April 1860 and graduated from the U. S. Military Academy in the class of 1881. In addition to being the oldest living officer in the grade of major general on cer in the grade of major general on the retired list, he is also, the oldest living graduate of the Military Acad-emy. General Hodges, the son of the distinguished Henry Clay Hodges, class of 1851, is now living in retire-ment in Norwallk, Conn., he having passed to the retired list 1 Dec. 1920 after more than 43 years of active rvice. Since General Farnsworth born on 28 Oct. 1862 he was more than two and one half years younger than General Hodges, at the time of his death on 19 Dec. 1955.

Not desiring to take any credit away from General Farnsworth, as his record will show he was one of our most distinguished general offi-cers, I think that it would be approriate to publish a correction of the acts presented above in justice to General Hodges.

USAFE's 317th TCW Flies 2,000,000 Ton Miles In Single Four-Month Project aggression.

Coincidentally the 317th is providing air mobility to USAFE units, and must itself stay combat ready to support U.S. and NATO forces through airborne assault, air re-supply and air evacuation.

As the successor of the 433d Troop
Carrier Wing, which in 1951 became the Carrier Wing, which in 1931 became the first USAF wing committed to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, the 317th has compiled a long record of service to the U.S. as well as to other nations.

Part of Air Logistics Service

The 317th's part in the Air Logistics Service, a system formed two years ago by Lt. Gen. William H. Tunner, Com-mander-in-Chief, USAFE, and origina-tor of the historic Berlin Airlift, constitutes a continuing assist to the capability and efficiency of the United States Air Force in Europe.

Linking widely separated USAFE installations by a system of regularly scheduled missions spanning Germany. France, Spain, Italy, Greece, North Africa and French Morocco, the Air Logistics Service became from the out-set one of the most important factors in sustaining the combat effectiveness of air units. According to Hqs, USAFE, the increased combat capability provided through ALS and allied programs during the first year of ALS operations would have cost the U.S. 345 million dollars in additional aircraft and equipment

In support of ALS, 317th Flying Box-cars were airborne nearly 7,000 hours— out of 10,000 total—in some 400 separate missions during the first half of 1955. More than two million ALS ton-miles were flown in 4,000 hours during one four-month project ending in November,

This project-entitled "Athenia This project—entitled "Athenia"—was ordered by Brig. Gen. Franklin Rose, 322d Air Division (Combat Cargo) Commander. Detachments from the 317th's three tactical squadrons were placed on temporary duty to Athens on a rotational basis, and were supported there by a specialized maintenance team from Neubiberg Air Base. It was the first time in recent history that the 317th had been called upon to conduct large-scale airlift operations so distant from the full maintenance and operational facilities of its home base.

Despite this and the numerous prob-lems inherent in such an operation, "Athenia" proved an effective operation.

The first unit assigned to Athenia was from the 39th Troop Carrier Sq. com-manded by Maj. Floyd K. Shofner. It returned with 1,500 flying hours and 680,000 ALS ton-miles tallied. Next the 41st squadron, commanded by Lt. Col. Philip C. Calhoun, accomplished 590,000 Philip C. Calhoun, accomplished 590,000 ALS ton-miles with 1,150 flying hours. Lt. Col. James E. Bauley's 40th squadron flew 950 hours completing 400,000 ALS ton-miles. The 39th squadron finished the project with more than 544,000 ton-miles for 1,300 flying hours. Another task, of vital importance to the U.S. and her allies, is the 317th mission involving practice airdrops of fully equipped U.S. and NATO paratroop units.

In the past year the wing has participated in eight such training exercises with French, British and U.S. troopers in Algeria, England and at several sites in Germany and France.

The Assistant De-fense Secretary is expected to give solid backing to the present general-flag strength and to ask for some ad-

WITH ALMOST THREE MILLION MEN under arms, the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps currently are restricted to 1266 general and flag officer billets. All four Services are entitled to more officers in high rank, under the terms of the Officer Grade Limitation Act, and are expected to plead for increases.

UNUSED LEAVE PAYMENTS will UNUSED LEAVE PAYMENTS will go to survivors of men who die before they can collect money due them, if Congress approves a bill which the Pentagon is backing. The Defense Department says few men would be affected by the measure but there are a handful who die before receiving their unused leave credit, in which case, the payments should go to survivors. Present law forbids such payment.

THE JOURNAL ARTICLE (11 Feb.) detailing problems active duty Servicemen face in obtaining 4½ per cent home loans will be introduced into the hearings of the housing subcom-mittee of the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency when that group takes up the military mortgage insurance program. A $90,000 HOME will be constructed at the USAF Academy for use of the Academy Superintendent. Authority to build the structure is requested by the Pentagon in the current military public works bill now before the Sen-ate Armed Services Committee.

THE AIR FORCE also is asking for two $54,000 homes for the Academy deans and homes for 44 professors to cost $31,500 each. The entire initial outlay for housing at the Academy is $1.53 million.

BELATED RECOGNITION is coming to famed photographer Joe Rosenthal who captured the Iwo Jima flagraising on film. When the Marines unveiled their Iwo Jima Statue near Arlington National Cemetery the names of those who participated in the historic event and of the sculptor, Felix de Weldon, were emblazoned on the monument but no mention of Rosenthal could be found. Complaints from Congressmen and others have brought the Corps to heel. Rosenthal's name will be added.

THE SURGEONS GENERAL will be called before the Symington Sen-ate Armed Services Subcommittee to give their views on the House-ap-proved bill authorizing appointment of Doctors of Osteopathy in the Medical Corps. Deputy Assistant Defense cal Corps. Deputy Assistant Defense Secretary Dr. Edward H. Cushing told the Senate group the ranking Service medical officers hold "some reserva-tions" about the bill. Senator Mar-garet Chase Smith (R-Me.) said in that case the Surgeons General should come up and tell the committee their

ONE OF THE MOST URGENT housing items in the Navy's 1957 con-struction program is a 1500-man bar-racks at the Norfolk (Va.) Naval Station. It will cost $2.3 million.

ALMOST HALF OF THE FUNDS in the Navy's building program are slated for the air arm; $79.5 million will go to continental air stations, including construction of two new sea-plane operating bases and an opera-tional guided missile launching and recovery facility on San Clement Isfacility on San Clement Is-

MARINE CORPS AVIATION FACILITIES also will be expanded. RAdm. C. S. Cooper, USN, Deputy Chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, told the Stennis Senate Armed Services Subcommittee that major buildups must be continued at Mojave, Calif., and Beaufort, S. C.

"IF DEPLOYED MARINE AIR UNITS were ordered home from the Far East in the near future," Admiral Cooper declared, "there are no air facilities upon which their aircraft could be based nor their personnel be housed." He added that "Insufficient facilities have been authorized for the basing of the 3d Marine Air Wing within the continental U. S."

AN AIRFIELD FOR ANNAPOLIS AN ARFIELD FOR ANNAPOLIS is still desirable, but the Navy is taking a new approach. Last year's military construction bill asked for $16.9 million authorization to build the USNA field but the item was dropped during a House-Senate conference. This year, the Navy is asking for $4 million to acquire land and prepare plans for the "much needed facility."

ANOTHER USNA REQUEST is for authority to reclaim 60 acres of submerged land from the Severn River so the Brigade of 3600 Midshipmen can have a larger area for exercise and recreation. "Until additional outdoor physical education facilities are provided," former Academy Superintendent VAdm. James L. Holloway, jr., said, "Midshipmen cannot be given adequate physical training so essential to their proper development."

PLANS FOR A MEMORIAL to General of the Armies John J. Pershing will be prepared by the American Battle Monuments Commission if Congress gives the green light. The Senate has approved the proposal and similar measures are pending in the RE-NAMING GRANDVIEW AFB in Missouri as the General John J. Pershing Airbase has been suggested as one means of memorializing the WWI AEF commander. The general was a native of the "Show-Me" State and Senator Stuart Symington thinks the idea of giving Pershing's name to the Central Air Defense Command headquarters would be "particularly noteworthy in view of General Persh-ing's early and continued interest in military airpower."

MEMO For Journal Readers

THERE'S NEW PAY RAISE TALK at the Pentagon these days, particularly in the Air Force, where Sec'y Quarles is convinced that new adjustments are necessary if his Service is to check the loss of critical specialists. As noted on Page 8, the Air Force is now 35,000 men below its fiscal '56 forecast and a further decline is in prospect. SEC'Y QUARLES CONTENDS that the Nation "must get away from the concept that it is reasonable and proper for a Serviceman's pay and benefits to be well below civilian standards." He argues that "we cannot and should not expect patriotism and pride of service to outweigh a big difference in pay, particularly when it affects a man's ability to provide reasonable comforts and security for his family." CHANCES APPEAR NEGLIGIBLE that there will be any Capitol Hill action this year on a military pay boost, but with the interest stimulated by Sec'y Quarles and other Pentagon leaders, it can be expected that the problem will be kept under active study, with a possibility of developing a full-scaled presentation for the next Congress.

SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFITS for all persons on active duty will be jeopardized unless Congress does one of two things—passes the House approved Survivor Benefits bill which places Service men under permanent Social Security coverage; or extend temporary legislation which gives automatic wage credits of $160 per month to all in uniform, regardless of rank. THIS STOP GAP coverage expires 1 April and the Senate Finance Committee has yet to schedule hearings on the survivor benefits bill. Defense officials, aware of the 1 April deadline, are set to ask Congress for an emergency extension of Social Security, if necessary. They hope, however, that the Senate next month will endorse the Survivor Benefits bill, a priority item in the President's program to raise attractiveness of military Service.

SOME SENIOR COLONELS of the Army may be retired earlier than previously expected. As it stands now, a permanent colonel who had failed of selection to that rank the first time is able to stay on active duty longer than his contemporaries. That situation is due to be changed; some colonels consequently will be retired with 30 or more years' service but less than five years in permanent rank.

AF SEC'Y QUARLES has been interrogated closely by the House Appropriations Committee on his attitude towards funds approved by his superiors for Air Force Research & Development in the next fiscal year. As former Ass't Defense Sec'y for R&D, he would not likely remain quiet if the Air Force did not receive what he considered adequate funds for R&D. The Secretary, who temperamentally is a far cry from such predecessors as Harold E. Talbott and Stuart Symington, undoubtedly would not sound off with any strong public criticism of the Administration program under any circumstances. ON THE OTHER HAND, his candor will require Mr. Quarles to tell the Congressional Committee in response to probing questions that if given additional money, the Air Force could put it to "effective use" on R&D programs. On that fine line, political heat will be generated.

THE ARMY IS ARGUING hard for more money to build armories and training facilities for the Reserve program. The fear is that thousands of young men completing six months active duty training will become discouraged with the lack of adequate training facilities. Army CofS Taylor points up the problem in reporting this week that the Army plans construction of more than 400 training centers in the year beginning 1 July.

GENERAL TAYLOR ADDS, however, that "actual construction is subject to the availability of funds and suitability of sites." By availability of funds the General means release by the Budget Bureau of money voted by Congress. IT WON'T BE SURPRISING if the Armed Services Committees look into this situation.

WHITE JACKETS will be worn by flight traffic specialists on MATS passenger flights. This attire has been used previously on VIP missions; now it will be worn on all flights to distinguish the specialists from other airmen riding as passengers.

ARMY AVIATION winged to the assist of the Air Force recently to solve an "air lift" problem at Barksdale AFB, La. It was necessary to hoist a 1250-pound pedestal for a Raytheon Air Weather Service Storm Detector radar device to the top of a 125-foot tower. But the Air Force found that it lacked an available crane to do the job. So a call was put in for an Army helicopter from Ft. Hood, Tex. The 'copter arrived, neatly lifted the pedestal, set it in place on top of the tower, and then went home.

CAPT. HENRY (ROBERT) MONTGOMERY, JR., USNR, the President's T.V. advisor, appears a cinch for rear admiral rank in the next 8 years. He will reach retirement age of 60 on 22 May 1963. Since the newly promoted four-striper won a Bronze Star Medal with Combat "V" during WWII, he will be eligible for retirement as a flag officer. ARMY AND AIR FORCE officers long have been jealous of the Navy-Marine Corps authority to retire certain combat-decorated officers in higher rank. There's little doubt that a Navy captain, with a rear admiral title on the retired list, has a prestige advantage over an Army or Air Force colonel who retires as a colonel.

ARMY PUBLIC INFORMATION prestige has taken a decided upturn. A major factor has been the willingness of Sec'y Brucker and CofS Taylor to participate in news conference and television interviews (See Page 3). Maj. Gen. Guy S. Meloy, jr., USA, new Army Information Chief, specially picked for the assignment by General Taylor, is fast winning friends among the Washington news corps.

ARMY AVIATION LEADERS will take careful precautions to see that the colonels and lieutenant colonels who complete flying training next year receive challenging assignments. Some Army officers—particularly those with much flying time—have feared that they would wind up in "chauffeur type" jobs.

THE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION continues to dawdle with proposed legislation which would ease dual compensation restrictions on the hire of retired Service officers for Federal jobs. The Administration indicated last year that it wanted changes in present laws—some dating to the 1890's—which bar hundreds of Retired persons from—many with critical skills—further Government service.

THERE IS LITTLE DOUBT, for example, that the acute shortage of military physicians and dentists could be eased by use of Retired officers.

DEPENDABLE SYSTEMS

The more deeply rooted you are in all the things of which systems are comprised, the better able you are to produce completely dependable systems.

Having produced millions of components, subsystems and complete systems for many years, Bendix Aviation is the logical direction to look for systems to solve many current problems as well as others anticipated. Bendix assets for systems work

THE JOB ... not "on the way"

Many of these rugged ski troops are earmarked to become instructors-the nucleus for a small but expanding group of specialized fighting experts. When they're moved to new assignments, it's essential that they go the fastest way-by the dependable Scheduled Airlines.

It's often the cheapest way, too, when the saving in pay and per diem dollars is considered. So next time you're moving one man or many-or traveling yourself, call a Scheduled Airlines representative. Compare the costs, speed and dependability of Scheduled flight with any other means of travel.

10% DISCOUNT for official travel on TR's.

The Spirit of Service That Keeps on Growing

There is a heritage of service that is passed on from one generation of telephone people to another.

It had its beginning more than eighty years ago when Alexander Graham Bell gave the world its first telephone. It has grown as the business has grown.

Many times each day and night this spirit of service is expressed in some friendly, helpful act for someone in need. The courtesy, loyalty and teamwork that telephone people put into their daily jobs are a part of it.

Out of it have come the courage and inspiration that have surmounted fire and flood and storm.

We, the telephone people of today, are vested with the responsibility of carrying on this trust. It is human to make mistakes and so at times the job we do for you may not be all that we want it to be. But in the long run, we know that how we do our individual job and how we bear our individual responsibility will determine how we fulfill our trust.

For our business is above all a business of people . . . of men and women who live and work and serve in countless communities throughout the land.

The Cotillion is sponsored by the U. S. Military Academy Class of 1934, several of whom, with their wives, will be in the receiving line. Music will be furnished by the Jumping Jacks, and light refreshments will be served during the evening.

Speed Concurrent Requests, Says AF

The Air Force has told the field that an expeditious reply to requests for concurrent travel overseas "is extremely important" and "is even more essential" in cases involving an expectant wife.

It was noted that wives beyond the end of the sixth month of pregnancy will not be permitted to travel on MSTS ships; travel on MATS planes is barred after travel on MAIS planes is barred after the seventh month.

Wives arriving at the port who are at, but not beyond the above calendar month's limitation, may be permitted to travel, provided they are embarked with-in two weeks after arrival and meet other requirements.

"Prompt handling of concurrent travel requests in such cases eases the mental hardships imposed by the pending PCS move and improves morale of the Service family," the Air Force said.

Gen. & Mrs. Klein Touring Florida-

The Adjutant General of the Army, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. John A Klein, are making an extensive trip through Florida this month, when they will visit Col. and Mrs. Donald R. Van Sickler and Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Kenneth B. Bush, for part of their time there.

GE's $20-Million Jet Engine Test Facility Will Be Ready For Mach 3½ Speeds In 1958

A $20,000,000 test facility capable of simulating supersonic flight conditions for jet engines three times more powerful than any now in pro-duction will be constructed and financed by the General Electric Company cording to J. Parker, general manager of the Company's Air-craft Gas Tur-bine Division.

will be the most advanced of its type in the world. It will be able to simulate the same conditions a large jet engine would encounter fly-ing at 2300 miles per hour, or three and a half times the speed of sound at 60,000 feet." Mr. Parker said.

The new facility will be located in the Cincinnati area near the Company's pres-

Cincinnati area near the Company's present jet engine plant at Evendale, and is expected to be completed in 1958. With its supporting building and equipment, it will almost be a small city in itself. Explaining the necessity for the new facility, Mr. Parker said, "As a result of the supersonic speeds of advanced aircraft, more powerful jet engines in the near future will be required to operate safely with air entering the engine at temperatures as high as 900 degrees Fahrenheit. These high air temperatures and high speeds create many mechanical and high speeds create many mechanical and metallurgical problems for jet en-gine designers, and this new facility will enable us to solve these problems and so deliver advanced engines on shortened time schedules."

Not only will engineers be able to "fly"

a test engine at high speeds and altitudes with the new facility, they will also be able to duplicate the conditions encoun-the during a dive or climb.

Main part of the test facility will be two altitude test cells, each having a diameter of 18 feet in which engines under test will be housed. Vast amounts of air, flowing at supersonic speeds, will be forced through the test cells to simulate engine flight conditions.

late engine flight conditions.

Before entering the test cells the air will be cooled or heated, as required. Two air flows of different temperatures will be mixed close to the cells to obtain the required test conditions.

The test facility will have its own power distribution station, water supply system, and steam plant for heating.

A crew of about 100 men will be needed to operate the new facility, which will use more than 80,000 kilowatts of electric

Included in the plans for the new facility is a system of noise level control.

Already under consideration are fu-ture extensions which will allow testing of engines under all possible conditions. even re-starting an engine after it has ceased operating at high altitude owing to equipment failure or improper han-

O'Seas PXs Doing 'Grand Job,' Chief Says, Customer Preference Rules Purchasing

Maj. Gen. H. L. Peckham, USA, Chief of the Army and Air Force Ex-change Service, has declared that Post Exchange privileges are the major factor in consideration of reenlist-

In a speech before the Textile Square Club in New York City, where Square Club in New York City, where 200 industry executives honored him on 9 Feb., General Peckham stated that more than 200 mobile exchanges in this country service troops on maneuvers or in otherwise isolated areas.

"These stores and services are lo-cated at about 170 military installations in this country and in 20 sepa-rate overseas areas," he said. "A few months ago, General Gallant (Brig. Gen. Edward S. Gallant, USAF, Deputy Chief of the AAFES) and I returned from visits to exand I returned from visits to exchanges in France, Germany, Austria and England," he said. "I can tell you from first hand observations that these overseas exchanges are doing a grand job in keeping our military personnel supplied with the familiar brands of American merchandise. "When our young soldiers and airmen get to a foreign land, have no fear that they go native in their mer-fear that they go native in their mer-chandise preferences . . . they want the American brands which they bought back home. Not only that but the peoples of foreign lands who work for the exchanges are in a position to observe the quality, style, and durability of American merchandise. My office here in New York performs all of the procurement of that merchandise for the overseas exchanges . over one third of a billion dollars year at the sell price." General Packham pointed out that merchandise is not advertised or pro-moted in the exchanges, and that only nationally known and accepted products are sold.

"There is one guiding rule in what we buy," he said. "We buy only what the customers want. We do not specu-late. We do not buy distress merchandise . . . Our customers are brand and quality conscious . . . and our procurement policies are shaped accordingly."

He declared there was no central procurement for the exchanges in the United States, but that duty is performed for each post and base exchange officer.

"I wish to emphasize this because it is something that is frequently mis-understood," General Peckham said. "Each of the 170 main exchanges in this country does its own procure-ment, based on customer demand and customer preference."

General Peckham also declared that "what we sell in our exchanges overseas is dictated by the requirements of military personnel and their families who may find the PX to be their only source of American goods."

"This means," he added, "appliances, home furnishings, men's, women's and children's colthing, and a wide variety of other items. There are no variety of other items. There are no restrictions on what we may sell in our overseas exchanges."

Specialized Maintenance

Behind these safety records is the revolutionary—for troop carrier wings—Specialized Maintenance Systems, which came into being after six months which came into being after six months of trial beginning early last year. In effect it combines all maintenance personnel into one organization—the 317th Field Maintenance Squadron—where formerly they were assigned to individual tactical squadrons. Under this organization, all maintenance personnel are available to work on all Wing aircraft, thus insuring a steady and efficient performance of maintenance requirements. The new system has proved to be efficient and practical.

quirements. The new system has proved to be efficient and practical.

That this system has paid off and will continue to do so is proven by the Wing record in flying safety. Maj. General Robert M. Lee, Twelfth Air Force Commander, emphasized this in his congratulatory message to all 317th units recently; "You have performed assigned missions safely and efficiently in spite of many difficulties encountered in the European Theater of operations. The records established can be envied by all flying organizations and should be a goal for all unit commanders. The 317th goal for all unit commanders. The 317th Troop Carrier Wing has demonstrated that a job well done is inherently safe."

Guided Missles

THE GLENN L. MARTIN CO. of Baltimore will spend about $10 million for facilities in the Denver, Colo., area to accelerate research and development of missiles. This will supplement activities at the Martin plant near Baltimore, Md., where the surface-to-surface Air Force Regulus was developed.

LOCKHEED'S MISSILE SYSTEMS division has announced that first contracts have been let for design and construction of its new research laboratories at Palo Alto (see last week's Journal).

The missile division announcement made by Director of Manufacturing and Plant Services Donald J. Murphy also revealed that the research buildings, the first in a series of laboratories to be built on a 22-acre site in Stanford University's industrial park, are expected to be completed and ready for occupancy by 1 Sept.

Spain is one of the sixteen MDAF ha-tions which sends students to bases of the USAFE Training Headquarters, of which Colonel Vinzant is also the Com-mander, for technical and flying train-ing under the terms of the Assistance Program.

Captain Welsh, who has instructed Captain Weish, who has instructed Spanish pilots here since May 1954 and has been Flight Commander for all Spanish students attending the T-33 jet training courses, was also awarded the status of Honorary Pilot in the Spanish

Air Force.
Colonel Vinzant, who as commander of Colonel Vinzant, who as commander of the Training Wing also commands Furstenfeldbruck Air Base, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Mark H. Vinzant, Sr., of Harding Drive, at St. Peterburg, Fla.

of the Mighty FORRESTAL

The U.S.S. FORRESTAL... 60,000-ton sea giant... the most powerful carrier afloat ... owes much of its fighting efficiency to its modern sensory system... including its advanced-design communication and air navigation "nerve centers" developed by Federal Telecommunication Laboratories ... a division of International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation.

To guide its planes safely home through darkness, fog, and stormy weather, the FORRESTAL utilizes Tacan, revolutionary system that continually indicates position of moving ship to its fast-flying planes. To keep in constant two-way voice contact with its pilots, the FORRESTAL uses a new ultra high frequency radio system... with an effective range over one-and-one-half times greater than many previous systems... beaming its power through new-type antennas in new locations below the level of the flight deck.

For ship-to-ship and ship-to-shore communication the FORRESTAL's mediumand-high frequency radio system provides clear and dependable transmission for voice, teleprinter, high-speed code and facsimile. The same electronic "nerve centers" will be installed on the new super carrier U.S.S. SARATOGA and other great aircraft carriers to come.

These vital developments . . . Tacan, UHF and MHF radio . . . are outstanding examples of the continuing contributions of IT&T to electronic progress . . . to the growing might of America's defensive forces.
